Good evening Chrystia,

I have been receiving a substantial amount of feedback on the events here domestically, particularly from centred minded folks. People are frustrated and tired over two years and are now questioning the direction the country is going.

Firstly, on the blockades - we are not seen as strong at this moment on this file. There is a vacuum of leadership and people are not worrying about jurisdiction. Blocking our most important trade routes and hurting our economy - my goodness. We are not seen as strong and decisive at this moment.

Secondly, we need to react to what is going on in the world on
